

Gloria Montgomery Featured in Draw Magazine

Gloria Montgomery, from Heber City, has drawings selected for publication in DRAW MAGAZINE. One of them, "Ben Quinters", appears on the cover of number 2 issue of this national new art publication. Draw Magazine is available at many Art Shops and at Reuel's Photo-Blue, in Salt Lake City. It is also available by subscription for $12.00.

Gloria Montgomery works at the "Hub One Stop" during the day and does her beautiful pencil drawings when she has time in the evenings and on weekends. Her drawings were selected from among several hundred submissions, to appear in print for the first time, and the idea that one made the front cover was really a "thrill" for Ms. Montgomery. Her work will be admired by 40,000 readers in every state, and will also be an inspiration to beginning artists.

Abraham Lincoln (Draw's Publisher) says, "Draw Magazine is dedicated to locating new artists, especially those with drawing skills, who have not been recognized. The world is filled with such people, and it is a wonderful feeling to be able to discover someone like Gloria Montgomery and publish them in a national magazine. Too often, other art publications choose to ignore these talented people, but Draw is just beginning to make a 'dent' in this problem by giving them the exposure they often deserve."

While Gloria has attended art classes, "on and off", for the past 15 years - Brigham Young University, The University of Utah, Utah Technical College, Salt Lake Art Center and Springville Art Museum - her two daughters take priority over everything, but her drawing is very important to her. She also
